THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

CORPORATION COUNSEL SMITH ON THE EFFE OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS ON THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR CHARITABLE INSTITU-

The Counsel to the Corporation, E. Delafield Smith, in compliance with the requisition of the Comptroller, has given his opinion to that ficial upon the effect of the recent constitutional ments upon the action of the Board of Esmate and Apportionment or the 24th December, 4. directing the payments of moneys to certain charitable institutions for the year 1875, and reaches the following conclusions:-

The constitutional amendments to article 8, sections 10 at 11, do not prohibit the city from making provision if the aid and support of the boor through any agencies instruments heretofore created or sanctioned by tist titve act for the relief of the destricte. The legislative sanction of such means, contemplated amendment 11 comprehends existing charitable institutions organized by law, as well as those which may created after the adoption of the amendment. The appropriations for the charitable institutions for even 1875, by resolution of the Board of Estimate and portionment, passed December 24, 1874, were made reflected the entire year before the constitutional amendments amendments.

amendments which had given rise to the loubt on the part of the Comptroller as to the propriety of continuing the payments thus dicted are contained in sections 10 and 11, added article 8 of the constitution of 1846, which are

Soliows:—
Section 10.—Neither the credit nor the money of the tate shall be given or loaned to or in aid of any assolation corporation or private undertaking. This section shall not, however, prevent the Legislature from taking such provision for the education and support of the bind, the deaf and oumb and invenile delinquents is to it may seem proper. Nor shall it apply to any tund properly now held, or which may hereafter be held, y the State for educational purposes. The state for educational purposes, the state for educational purposes. The section of the state for education of the state of

After referring to the number and character of the various institutions in the city, to which an aggregate of $825,905 has been appropriated for he year 1875 in various sums, and to the general ethod of construction and interpretation of constitutional amendments, Mr. Smith proceeds to the elucidation of what he argues as the true meaning and operation of the section quoted. The tenth section, while it promitis any grant by the legislation of the credit or money of the State as a loan or or in aid of any association, corporation or private undertaking, in order not to cripple the legislative power entirely in respect to certain peculiar objects of bounty, declares that the prohibition shall not prevent the Legislative from making such provision as to it may seem proper for three special classes of persons—the blind, the deal and damb and in venile delinquents. By this clause certain exceptional objects are established, rowhich the money or credit of the state may be loaned or given, and this has an important bearing upon the construction of the eleventh section relating to the powers of countes, cities, towns and villages. This latter section, while providing that no city, county, town or village shall give any money or credit to, &c., like the tenth section, it being declared that "this section shall not prevent any such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor as may be authorized by law." Says the counsei: stitutional amendments, Mr. Smith proceeds to the counsel:—

It is to be observed that the authorized provision is not confined to the mere "support," or feeding, or clothing, or sheltering of the poor, but it extends also ro their ald," which may in the case of infants and other destitute persons failing within the category of the "poor," omprehend reformatory or disciplinary training, of the eating of disease of body or mind for not only is the and of the poor a phrase sufficiently comprehensive to achieve reference to the poor a phrase sufficiently comprehensive to achieve reference the proceed themselves, but his phrase is supplemented by an enlarging description chack extends it to any kind of relief that is authorized y law.

This clause Mr. Smith understands to refer not This clause Mr. Smith understands to refer not only to such aid or support of the poor as may be authorized by law after the adoption of the amendment, but also to the existing provisions of law which were in operation at the time of its adoption. It has been suggested that the phrase 'as may be authorized by law' is prospective only in its operation; but the phrase is a mere qualifying description or limitation of the kind of aid or supports that is, such aid or support as is authorized by law. The counsel then refers to the status of one of the charitable institutions of the city to show that any other construction would lead to consequences so grave as to render it necessary to counsequences so grave as to render it necessary to reject it:

That none of these institutions, having by law a special capacity to act in aid said support of the poor, were expected or intended by the framers of the amendment to be excluded from the aid of municipal funds, is manifest from the report of the Committee of the Revieers of the Constitution (Committee on Sectarian Appropriations), by whom the amendments were proposed. "Your committee," said the report, "are fully impressed with the belief that the proposed amendment will not service that the proposed amendment will not service or phan asylums, homes for the friendless, hoppitals and other charitable institutions so freely scattered over our State. The Boards of Supervisors of the various counties and the Common Councils of the different cities. Save all the power they have herefore had to pay to each class of said institutions the most liberal compensation for the care and support of the different classes of aniortunates for whom they were designed," * * Gee the report signed by E. W. Leavenworth, Chairman, March 16, 1873.)

sation for the care and support of the different classes of ninotrantates for whom they were designed." * * * * (See the report signed by E. W. Leavenworth, Chairman, March 16, 1873.)

ANOTHER VIEW.

There is another view of this subject, which conducts to the same conclusion, so far as the appropriations for 1875 are concerned. By the city charter of 1875 the Board of Estimate and Apportionment are directed at a certain time to "make an estimate of the amounts required to pay the expenses of conducting the public business of the city and county of New York, in each department and branch thereof, for the next ensning financial year." When the estimate becomes final "the goveral sums" embraced in it become and are "appropriated to the several purposes and department sherein named." These provisions of the charter are to a certain extent a delegation of legislative power; for, while it is not competent for the Board to create new subjects or objects of expenditure, it is devolved upon the Board to determine and appropriate the amounts required for the public business of the city and county in sach department and branch thereof. This is protanted a legislative function. The question is, then, whether the supplying of these institutions with the public funds of the city or county is a part of "the public business of the city of the public business of the city of the public funds of the city or county is a part of "the public funds of the city or county is a part of "the public funds of the city or county is a part of "the public funds of the city or county would have to provide for the relief of human suffering or leave it wholly unprovided for. While they are, in respect to their legal position and right, private corporations or associations, they perform to a certain extent a public function, and their relations to public objects, to repart so much of their affairs as is involved in supplying them with the sid of municipal runds is a part of the public business of the city in one of its branches. They were, then,

I am, therefore, of opinion that the payments contemplated by the appropriation of December 28, 1874, for the pear 1875, under the head of "Asyluma, Reformatories and Charitable in situations," must be made. I am, sir. E. DELAFIELD SMITH, Counsel to the Corporation.

THE METHODIST MINISTERS.

The discussion of the peculiar relations of Methodist ministers to one another arising out of the itinerancy was continued yesterday in the preachers' meeting by Drs. B. M. Adams, James Porter and J. M. Buckley. Dr. Adams took gen. eral grounds that there is nothing in the disci-pline of the Methodist Episcopal Church to probibit any courch or pastor ifom negotiating for ministerial services. He thought men got to their true level in the ministry as they did in any other palling or profession, and the men who got to the front in the ministry are the men who have intellectual and moral force in them, and to push any other class of men lorward is to make complete fail-ures. The itinerancy he considered the salvation of the average man, for without it he would be left to shift for nimself, but with it he is provided with some plan to work for God and for the salva-tion of souls. Dr. Adams considered the ministry as a place for making money altogether too low a plane fer any Christian man to go on. He would himself rather drive a team or gather ashes from house to house than enter or continue in the min. istry unless he felt with the prophet that "woe is istry unless he felt with the propnet that "woe is me if I preach not the gospel" and looked for his chief reward hereafter. Dr. Porter, who is a recognized anthority on Methodist polity, defined the contract that is presumed to exist between the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church that they should not negotiate for piaces for themelyes, but leave their appointments to the bishops. For twenty-six years when he was in the pastorate he kept nis part of the contract, but he would not do so now if he were in the ministry.

This Contract has Ercoms Defined.

Formerly the ministry alone made choice of the men who held their destiny, but at the last General Conference it was in the power of forty laymen to say who should be bishops and in whose hands the destiny of 10,000 or 12,000 ministers should rest. The contract having been broken, herefore he should not feel found to onserve it he were now in the ministry but would negotiate for the est piace he could attain to and use all houotable means to get it. The bisnops and presiding edders and the General Conference having fallen in with and indorsed the system of negotiasing, he had no hope for a change and return to the old ways. Methodism is driting in the direction of legal contracts between churches and ministers like the Protestant Episcopal Church, and he believed that by and by the bish-ps would have little or nothing to do but indorse those contracts. Old men and average men should therefore accept the inevitable as cheerinhy and gracefully as possible. Mr. Buckley reletred to the otigin of Methodism to show that Mr. Wesley was a pope in the sense of making the appointments of his preachers without any regard to the wishes of the societies or of the ministers. This was the rule in the United States aso, while the Church was small and leeble. Bishop ashbury notes in its journal that at one conference he had shaken hands with all the Methodist preachers in America, and that he prayed for them by name every day. But now, went the Church man and the members and ten thousand ministers in eighty con erences it is impossible for the bishops to have any such acquaintance as that with the preachers. They cannot possibly meet every conference oftener than once in six or eight years—a period altogether too long to admit of more than being made with the preachers, For this reason the bishops could not know the wants of the churches or of the ministers, and therefore could not make the appointments now as intelligently as aforetime. The prejudice that exists against presiding elders and the partiality that they foo often show in apprintments deours them from being the proper persons to decide the destinies of their brethren in the ministry. The matter is therefore legitimately referred to the people and the preachers to negotiate among themselves. When he had been applied to by church committees he had always agreed to serve them if they got the appointing power to send him. He had never said less or more and he would not stay in any denomination when he could not say that much. They had heard a great deal about the trials and annoyances of preachers, but no

POST OFFICE NOTES.

The Postmaster reports that, contrary to general opinion, the detention of inland mails has been remarkably small, considering the fact of the severity of the weather and the generality of The trains have not been much behind hand and Western trains have run with more punctuality than before in years. Te public has, there-fore, had very little reason to complain in this respect. Regarding European mails there has been more reason for dissatisfaction. weather at sea has been very boisterous, and all the lines are in consequence making very slow passages. Two of the German steamers, which also carry portions of the English malls, broke down in the English Channel—the Deutchsland and the Necgar—and their mails had to be transferred to other boats of other lines, which was the occasion of much loss of time and consequent annoyance to merchants and others. The worst of this is now over, however, and the mails will be more punctual in future, no doubt.

It is said at the Post Office that year by year the Valentine business is dropping away and what was once one of the most popular customs of our youth is now considered childish and nonsensical. The increase of postage on Saturday above that of ordinary days was about 40.000, which may all be put to valentines. This is a decrease of some 20.000 on last year's consumption of the article. The valentines were all for city delivery and almost none were sent out of town.

The fretting and funning of the Post Office attaches to get away from the present ricketty building will not be satisfied uptil June and possibly July next. The reast approved forms, This will continue fully five months more.
